MONSIEUR VERDOUX ¹

Charlie Chaplin

Subtitled, "A Comedy Of Murders," the film deals with a middle-aged blue-beard, Henri Verdoux, played by Chaplin.

The world was not ready for Chaplin's indictment of all war as murder; few went to see the picture, and it received only a limited release. Since then "Monsieur Verdoux" has become one of the most popular of the Chaplin films; a genuine case of a movie being ahead of its time. (123 min., black and white, dialogue.)

With world conditions deteriorating in the late 1930's, Chaplin turned to political satire for his first dialogue film.

Many had pointed out the similarities in appearance between Hitler and Chaplin's tramp character, and so he produced "The Great Dictator" as an indictment of the tyrannies of that dangerous and rather ridiculous world leader. (128 min., black and white, dialogue.)

THE KID AND THE IDLE CLASS (1921) 1

Charlie Chaplin

"The Kid" was immediately hailed as a screen masterpiece, and has remained one of Chaplin's best remembered films. One of the reasons for the picture's fame is Jackie Coogan.

Chaplin discovered Coogan in a railway station, and signed him for the film. Chaplin recently completed a score for "The Kid", and this will be the first time this new score has been heard.

Chaplin's "The Idle Class", a rare short, will accompany "The Kid". Chaplin plays two roles in the film — the little tramp, and a millionaire playboy. Delightful. (90 min., black and white, musical score.)
