Fame Or Money, Which do I chase as An Artiste? PART I

This has been a long-standing question which appears to be complicated by Thoughts, Imaginations, or peer opinions.

People chase fame because they, subconsciously, believe that having people fawning over them will finally make them love themselves. If millions of people adore you, you must be pretty amazing, right? Unfortunately, this isn't how self-esteem works. You can have all of the fame in the world and still dislike who you are deep down.

Money, however, is practical. People chase money because money pays bills. However, an obsession with money is usually there for the same reason; people believe, on a subconscious level, that if they just have enough money, they will finally love themselves. Once again, this isn't how self-esteem works.

Money and fame can be great, but will not cure bad self-esteem. Money, however, is more practical than fame. These were just to balance the fact that the both parties are necessarily useful for any creatives respectively...

Now, let's look at Artiste, Musicians, Entertainers, & Music inclined persons...

Every intentional Artiste who's aiming at the top in the Industry of music, should first look out for profitable ways to grow bigger, while he or she makes good income from music as his craft...

Yea, its pretty true that Fame is one thing every entertainer craves for. but the fact is "MUSIC NEEDS MONEY" so be attentive to this fact and satisfy it in order to get a meaningful and admirable result...

Also, to balance this point. we've got most Artiste and entertainers who were birth into wealth and have tried all possible ways to hit the stardom yet seems abortive, so why don't we get practical by employing the right and useful strategy(ies) that will help us grow, rather than chasing "FAME"...

A recording artiste who've gone through the hurdles and pains involved in making out a good song will definitely understand that Money" is essential, even while scaling using, A scale of preference.

every promotional involvement and activities that goes round the cycle of an artiste is money demanding and close attention to making MONEY will relief you, mostly, when you're serving as an Independent Artiste...

FAME IS CLIMATIC

Know this! Rationally every Artiste is famous and popular, now this depends on how you define Fame to yourself. most people takes fame to being popular, influential and celebrated by both the known and unknown friends, fans, followers, and well wishers.

while others takes fame to be gaining mere popularity and immediate social influence, this might just noticeable to people around that geographical location.

but the fact is, the both Views of Fame can truly be seen as Fame... In Music we've got both the Local, National, and International Artiste. Remember barely all of them makes good music and entertain well, but the difference between these categories is how the function differently at their various locations...

Fame Is Climatic

Fame Is Climatic

Fame Is Climatic, this means, just as a given climate is well known in a particular geographical location given its duration, Fame is no difference. everyone has a big face in their different locations, while some even barely known in their based location...

but, what heights you above all of these comparison is making "MONEY" and placing extreme value on your sound...
